Atlas Fire Second Anniversary Commemoration - PG&E Shuts Off Regional Power For Two Days! Tenth Anniversary of the Destruction of the Lake Berryessa Resorts - Still NO Progress with the Bureau of Reclamation

by Peter Kilkus
Holiday Celebrations This Year?
 The 2019 holiday season has just begun. Which will be the special one for Lake Berryessa?

Halloween
 Will the Bureau of Reclamation answer Napa County's "Trick or Treat" call with a treat rather than its usual bait and switch tricks which have led to a multi-year delay in the revitalization of Lake Berryessa? The important treat would be a Managing Partner Agreement (MPA) that allows Napa County to take over management of the lake resorts.

Thanksgiving
 Will the Lake Berryessa community celebrate the happiest Thanksgiving in years knowing that the MPA will lead quickly to Requests for Proposals (RFP) being sent to compnies wishing to bid on managing the resorts? There were nine positive responses to the Request for Interest and Information (RFII) distributed by Napa County in 2017.

Christmas
 Will Napa County give the Lake Berryessa community its late, but well-deserved, Christmas present of a ready-to-go bid package to be distributed before the end of the year? Reclamation has reserved the Lake Berryessa Senior Center and Community Hall for a meeting on December 5th but has not specified the purpose of the meeting.

Positivity vs. Reality
 A Lake Berryessa News editorial colleague, nicknamed "Mr. Positivity", continually counsels me to think happy thoughts. I have a plaque on my wall that states, "If you're lucky enough to live at the lake, you're lucky enough." But as someone who has fought the Bureau of Reclamation for 20 years - yes, 20 years - to minimize its wanton destruction of the Lake Berryessa community, it's sometimes hard to but let's try.

The final Ragatz report in May, 2017 was titled, "Lake Berryessa: An Untapped Resort Development Opportunity" and stated that "Lake Berryessa now represents one of the most untapped opportunities in the country for new resort development and local economic impacts."

Ragatz viewed Lake Berryessa as a year-round destination, not simply one for the summer months. Hospitality offerings that include bird watching, health and wellness programs, spa services and culinary education could drive off-season and mid-week demand, it said. It will be important to reestablish the reputation of Lake Berryessa with criteria of success, quality, and an "in" destination to visit.

Many thorough economic and environmental reports have been part of previous Reclamation Bid Prospectuses and are available for use by Napa County. Releasing new bids should be a reasonably easy task.

Supervisors Dillon and Pedroza with Deputy County Executive Officer Molly Ratigan have been negotiating with the Bureau of Reclamation for several years regarding Lake Berryessa. Let's speculate that in a fit of mutual respect, the latest terms for an MPA are close to resolution.

Let's say our supervisors are quite upbeat about their final meeting with the BOR. Say they told Reclamation that negotiations are over and both teams of lawyers have gone through everything with a fine comb. Say that all that's needed is for Reclamation to make a final decision on a couple of items.

Then the County negotiating team addresses a near-future Supervisor's meeting to get the rest of the Supervisors to accept and approve what was presented to Reclamation.

New RFP's go out by the end of the year which include the required 50 year contract term and the approval for the use of subcontractors. A response date is set for March 31, 2020. Resort operators are selected by May, 2020. Revitalization of the selected resorts begins in the summer of 2020.

Certainly an aggressive schedule, but in my opinion doable. Lake Berryessa deserves this type of approach after so many years of neglect. Thousands of words, plans and diagrams have already been written which can be reused.

I have a friend who always told me he had two girlfriends. One was Italian named Rosy Scenario, the other was French and named Skylab Debris. He enjoyed Rosie because she was always happy and looking forward, but with Skylab he often felt that the something bad might be falling on his head from above. I think I'll choose Rosy too.

Daylight Savings Time ends Nov. 3, 2019
 Starting in 2007, DST began in the US on the second Sunday in March, when people move their clocks forward an hour at 2 a.m. local standard time (so at 2 a.m. on that day, the clocks will then read 3 a.m. local daylight time).
 Daylight saving time ends on the first Sunday in November, when clocks are moved back an hour at 2 a.m. local daylight time (so they will then read 1 a.m. local standard time).
 Last year, DST began on March 11 and ended on Nov. 4. And this year, DST will begin on March 10 and ends on Nov. 3, 2019. You will then move your clock forward an hour on March 8, 2020, and the new cycle will begin again.

2 The Stock Market Is NOT The Economy, Stupid!

by Peter Kilkus

I want to focus on the stock market in a bit of detail because it is a major driving force in the way corporations and clueless people behave. Breaking through the myths fed to the general public by the financial media can bring a revelation akin to that of an old time Catholic who finally realized he wouldn't go to hell for eating meat on Friday!

The stock market is not the hub of capitalism, as some believe. In fact trading in bonds and foreign exchange dwarfs stock market trading. There are three alleged purposes for the stock market. The first is that it provides a way for some new companies to raise large amounts of capital. The second is that it provides an additional source of capital, if needed, after a company has gone public, through a secondary issue of stock into the marketplace. And third, it provides a measure of the "market value" of a company when one company decides to buy another.

In the first case, a company basically sells its soul in an initial public offering (IPO). This is the process of "going public." It raises millions of dollars with the benefit of not having to pay the money back to anyone – it's not a loan. But going public does affect the soul of the company because everything the company now does must be done in public under the scrutiny of the government and the shareholders. This is not necessarily good.

The simplest example of the negative aspect of being a public company is that the managers of a private company have the freedom to make rational decisions. They can decide to lower their profit margin - to invest in new people or equipment or to avoid a layoff, for example - without causing any impact on an arbitrary stock price. I have been in situations where we did just that.

The real incentive to go public is the large amounts of money the financial backers and each employee of the company, not just the managers, can make because of their stock options. The goal of most new startup companies is to go public for that reason, and the case can be made that it creates very strong incentives for the employees to work diligently to make the company a success. But when big money is the ultimate goal, the law of unintended consequences often bares its fangs.

The case of the secondary stock offering is simple – more stock sold in the public market equals more money in the company's bank account. But it obviously drives the company to keep the stock price high now if it plans to sell more stock later. The third purpose, providing an objective value of a company, has some relative validity in the way the game is played today. But it is not the only, nor necessarily the best, mechanism for that valuation.

Consider Internet company stocks in 1999, for example. But none of the three purposes discussed above leads to significant financial activity compared to the vast amounts of money traded daily in the stock market. What no one wants you to know, and what only a small percentage of people understand, is that the stock market is nothing more than a big gambling casino with the large financial companies as primary owners, fund managers as the dealers, and stock analysts as the lounge singers.

Large and small investors wander among the various game tables with the only real difference being the cash needed to bankroll one of the games. In the broadest sense, the stock market provides no real productive value to an economy.

The Small Investor: Gambler/Sucker/ Believer (Choose One)

Despite the stories about delivery drivers getting rich off stocks traded online, the boom has bypassed most Americans. As of 2015, 40 percent of households owned stock directly and indirectly - including through a mutual fund, individual retirement account and defined contribution pension plan, for example. This is a significant increase from 32 percent in 1989, but still less than half of all households.

A growing number of Americans own stock, but most still don't own much. Less than one-third of households (29 percent) owned stock worth more than $5,000 in 1995. Almost 90 percent of the value of all stocks and mutual funds owned by households was in the hands of the top 10 percent. Wealth projections through 1997 suggest that 86 percent of the benefits of the increase in the stock market between 1989 and 1997 went to the richest 10 percent of households, with 42 percent going to the top 1 percent alone.

But what drives individual stocks? Again, especially since it's a casino, it's simply a perception of a company or industry segment. If I think a stock will go up because I think other people will think it will go up, I buy now. When it does go up, I sell, take my profits, and look for something else I think will go up. If it goes down, I sell, take my losses against my income tax, and look for something else I think will go up. Since it's so simple, a ritual has grown up around this activity to make it seem complex, scientific, or logical. The mythmakers will say that a company has a value based on its future revenues and profits. This is called determining the "market fundamentals" of a company.

Through "analysis" the "professionals" will judge the future sales projections in a company's "target market", their potential profitability based on their "efficiency", the capability of their "management team" to meet their plan, and peg a stock price. Any stock price is essentially arbitrary. The final driver for the stock to go up or down over time is primarily the change in short term profitability of the company which drives the herd mentality of the market players.

So why do normal people invest in the stock market? Many have no choice since their pension funds and 401K money is invested in stocks but not controlled by them. For others with a choice, it's not just raw greed, but a "reasonable" desire to have more. If others have done it, why can't I? But there are risks. Say you have $10,000 in a CD at 5%, you make $500 interest in a year with no risk. With a CD from a bank you actually get the $500 deposited in your bank account at the end of the year, as well as your principal back, for a new total of $10,500. Then you can decide to buy another CD or not.

But the financial media tell you that only conservative little old ladies own CDs and you can get twice the return by buying stock. If you buy 500 shares of some stock selling at $20 per share, you've now fully invested your $10,000. If you're lucky, the stock goes up $2 (or 10%) during the year and you "make" $1,000 (instead of the CD's $500). But remember you only get the money if you now sell the stock. And typical stocks are notorious for movements of several dollars at a time. At the end of the year the stock may just as likely be selling for only $18 per share and your original investment is now down to only $9,000.

You lost $1,000 by trying to make an additional $500. Some gamble if you really need your money! Mutual funds do limit your risk by spreading it over many more stocks, but the principle is the same.

Stocks Support Company Growth – Not: Whose IPO Is It Anyway?

Both civilians and professional apologists would probably say that the stock market raises capital for investment. In fact it doesn't. Most of the daily trading in the stock market is of existing shares, not newly issued ones. Over the long haul, almost all corporate capital expenditures are internally financed, through profits and depreciation allowances. Of course, some individual firms do issue stock to raise money, but surprisingly little of that goes to real investment either. The process we all hear about is an Initial Public Offering (IPO). However, once the IPO takes place, the stock, mostly "common stock" which often pays no dividends if the company is small, is traded in the "secondary" stock market (98% of NYSE and almost all of NASDAQ is common stock). This means that the stock is traded among individuals with no real connection to the original company.

Ten Years Ago at Lake Berryessa (October, 2009)

Lake Berryessa folks are in a state of anticipation now that the concession bids have been received. On September 30th, the Bureau of Reclamation received bids for all the resorts at Lake Berryessa. Bureau of Reclamation spokesman Pete Lucero said on Oct. 6, that they had received "at least 2 bids for each of the six resorts available for new contracts." He also said that the names of the bidders would not be released at this time.

The Lake Berryessa News has confirmed the following: Steele Park owner Sean Buckley has bid on Steele Park Resort. Markley Cove owners John and Linda Frazier have bid on Markley Cove Resort. Present Rancho Monticello owners did not bid on Rancho Monticello resort since they expected their bid to be disqualified. They still expect to receive fair market value for their facilities.

Present Spanish Flat owners did not bid on Spanish Flat resort because "the conditions in essence said we would be disqualified if we tried." Previous bidder Peter White, who had been a partner in the Recreation Del Sol Enterprises bid in 2007 did not bid this time.

Calls were not returned by Forever Resorts or the Pensus Group. Informed observers believe that Pensus did bid on all six resorts but Forever Resorts did not bid on any resorts. This leaves at least one "mystery bidder" for Putah Creek, Berryessa Marina, Rancho Monticello, and Spanish Flat.

Halloween Humor?

Halloween was confusing. All my life my parents said, "Never take candy from strangers." And then they dressed me up and said, "Go beg for it." I didn't know what to do. I'd knock on people's doors and say, "Trick or treat. No, thank you." ~ Rita Rudner

A company doesn't sell its stock on the open stock market. In reality, a consortium of investment banking and brokerage firms (the underwriters) helps determine the amount of stock and the guaranteed initial price of the stock to be offered (called "taking the company public"). The underwriters then buy the stock from the company at the guaranteed IPO price (for example, 5 million shares at $25 per share for $125 million to the company).

Once that happens the company, as a company, has no more special ownership of the stock – it has the money in the bank. But individual employees in the company, especially senior management, with thousands or tens of thousands of stock option shares, have an extremely keen personal interest in the outcome of the IPO. The final price in the market is what they will get for their shares when they are finally able to sell them (usually over a four-year vesting period).

Take a real life example. An engineer who joins a startup company may get an option for 5,000 shares at $0.05 per share. He or she works incredibly hard for 3 or 4 years (Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Easter holidays included). The stock splits once before the IPO and once after the IPO. Our engineer now has 20,000 shares at $0.0125 per share. In the boom times the stock is at $42 per share and the engineer is looking at $840,000 profit, before taxes. (However, if the stock crashes to $4 per share, as this one did less than two years later, the profit drops to only $80,000.)

Perform the same calculation for a senior manager who joined the company at the same time as the engineer but got an original option for 20,000 shares! Even assembly workers and test technicians received stock options worth tens of thousands of dollars. Many people bought new cars for cash after the IPO.

The original underwriters also have a deep interest in the IPO because they were the ones who actually paid the initial price and will only make a profit if the price of the shares increases (for example, to $35 per share, for a $50 million profit on the original five million shares) as they are sold into the open stock market. Of course, the members of this investment group are also usually members of the initial capital financing of the IPO company and so may also own millions of low-priced stock option shares from their initial investment in the startup. For example, if the IPO is for five million shares, there may be an additional thirty million shares, at an average cost of $1, in the hands of employees and the financial backers. Although the company makes a significant amount of money in the initial round, the large financial market players are the big winners in the game.

Computers increasingly call the shots in financial markets

The job of capital markets is to process information so that savings flow to the best projects and firms. That makes high finance sound simple; in reality it is dynamic and intoxicating. It reflects a changing world. Today's markets, for instance, are grappling with a trade war and low interest rates. But it also reflects changes within finance, which constantly reinvents itself in a perpetual struggle to gain a competitive edge.

The latest revolution is in full swing. Machines are taking control of investing—not just the humdrum buying and selling of securities, but also the commanding heights of monitoring the economy and allocating capital. Funds run by computers that follow rules set by humans account for 35% of America's stockmarket, 60% of institutional equity assets and 60% of trading activity.

New artificial-intelligence programs are also writing their own investing rules, in ways their human masters only partly understand. Industries from pizza-delivery to Hollywood are being changed by technology, but finance is unique because it can exert voting power over firms, redistribute wealth and cause mayhem in the economy.

October 2019 Horoscopes

Aquarius (1/20-2/18): You awoke this morning a young man without a care in the world, but due to cosmic events beyond your control, you'll end the day as the oldest woman ever inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame.

Pisces (2/19-3/20): You will soon become obsessed with disproving the long-standing assertion regarding the impossibility of roller-skating in buffalo herds.

Aries (3/21-4/19): Although you are firmly convinced that there are some things mankind was just not meant to know, you're not exactly sure how you're supposed to be able to tell what they are.

Taurus (4/20 – 5/20): Juggling three young children isn't easy for any mother, but then, that's why you start with tennis balls and bowling pins first.

Gemini (5/21 – 6/21): Due to the high incidence of hijinx, tomfoolery, and puns, you'll finally decide to stop answering doors during knock-knock jokes.

Cancer (6/22-7/22): The stars are just going to go out on a limb here and say you're tired of turkey sandwiches.

Leo (7/23-8/22): You'll continue to grow as a human being this week, much to the relief of all those geneticists.

Virgo (8/23-9/22): Every day on Earth is like a beautiful gift from God, which is thoughtful and all, but you'd probably prefer something you can actually use.

Libra (9/23-10/22): You thought whale-watching sounded harmless enough, but now that they've decided to watch you back, it's really starting to become a problem.

Scorpio (10/23-11/21): You'll be mesmerized by the simple beauty of a grand-piano-shaped shadow that somehow just keeps getting bigger all around you.

Sagittarius (11/22-12/21): You will be celebrated and vilified in equal measure when you scientifically determine the exact point at which a cute kitten becomes a full-grown cat and starts to suck.

Capricorn (12/22-1/19): It occurs to you that the best and most practical way for you to follow your dreams is to spend most of your time asleep.

A Poison Tree

by William Blake

A Poison Tree is a poem that focuses on the emotion of anger and the consequences for our relationships should that anger be suppressed. It deals with the darker side of the human psyche. It is one of English literature's most striking explorations of the corrupting effects of anger.

The speaker tells of how he talked to a friend about his anger and everything was fine but with an enemy he could not do so and kept the anger inside. It began to grow, eventually becoming a metaphorical tree with poison fruit.

The enemy or foe ends up under the tree, destroyed by the speaker's pent up anger. The speaker seems ok about this but is there some doubt about the destructiveness of his anger? Early communication of anger seems the best way to deal with it.

William Blake's poem was written in 1794. Society at that time was encouraged to bottle up emotions and to present a polite and unruffled persona to the world. Blake thought this approach unhealthy and advocated a more expressive mode of being, especially with regards to potentially festering emotions. His ideas were against the prevailing attitudes of the church and state.

A Poison Tree uses metaphor, antithesis and biblical associations to highlight the self-damage that can proceed from suppressing anger. The emphasis is on letting go of negative emotions and moving on with life before this energy impacts on the health and wellbeing of others.

A Poison Tree

I was angry with my friend:
I told my wrath, my wrath did end.
I was angry with my foe:
I told it not, my wrath did grow.

And I watered it in fears,
Night and morning with my tears:
And I sunned it with smiles,
And with soft deceitful wiles.

And it grew both day and night,
Till it bore an apple bright.
And my foe beheld it shine,
And he knew that it was mine.

And into my garden stole,
When the night had veild the pole;
In the morning glad I see;
My foe outstretched beneath the tree.

Future Scent

by Jason Colby

I can smell the future and it doesn't smell good. Here I stand waiting to pay for my coffee knowing that in about twenty four hours someone will be shot in this convenience store. Should I bother telling the cashier that a shooting will occur and someone will be injured or killed? When they inevitably ask how I could know this they will either think I am crazy or that I have violent intentions. The smell of gunpowder combined with the almost rusty smell of blood is what informs me of the events that will transpire.

This ability came to me several years ago following removal of a brain tumor. The smells were confusing at first and the doctor visits, examinations, and tests all said I was healthy with no brain damage. It took time to understand what the smells meant. It started to make sense when I smelled smoke at my parents house only to have a major fire occur there a day later.

It could have been a slow growing fire that I had smelled however no one else noticed anything prior to the event. Later when I smelled blood at the office I had a hard time understanding what it was and why I was smelling it. The next day, while opening a package with a box cutter, Travis cut his arm fairly deep. The smell of blood, almost rusty, was clearly what I had smelled the day before.

Over time I have learned that what I smell becomes reality twenty four hours later. Because I don't see the events that will happen, it can be hard to identify exactly what is going to happen, and even more difficult to determine who will be affected. Who will be shot in the convenience store? The clerk, a child, the perpetrator?

This is certainly no gift. I lack details and there is not much I can do to help those that will be involved, whoever they are. Are there others with similar abilities? Certainly I can't be the only one.

A couple of days have passed since I was in the store and the local paper reveals the events surrounding what I smelled. Turns out a person attempted to rob the store at gunpoint and an undercover police officer had shot and killed the robber. The streets are crowded as I make my way to the bus stop.

Intense smells from everywhere suddenly overwhelm me and I stumble grabbing a light pole to steady myself. The smell of dust, acrid smoke, blood, sweat, and a multitude of other scents I can't identify assault me from every direction. As I hold the pole trying to steady myself a passer by is listening to the news on their phone.

The reporter is explaining how a large comet will be passing closer to Earth than previously predicted. No impact on earth is expected. I can smell the future and it does not smell good.

This is going to be very bad.
